Variation Of The Finlay Method As Used In 1914, In SouthWestern Wisconsin. After a somewhat careful consideration of the zinc situation, it was decided to use the Finlay principles, as the basis for arriving at the valuations of the mines for assessment purposes. These principles had been applied with fairly satisfactory results to the copper mines of the Keweenaw peninsula, and to the iron mines of northern Wisconsin and Michigan. This system, in its endeavor to obtain sums representing sale value, was believed to check fairly well with the essentials of the general property system. Schedules of questions asking, among other things, for information concerning exploration, production, receipts, costs and profits from each individual property for the past five years were sent to the various companies in March, and a return was called for in May, including all available data to May 1st. Before and during this period, the writer made a personal examination of every active mine with...
