D. , was born in London on February 10, 1791, died on September 24, 1868, and was buried in St. Pauls Cathedral, of which for the last nineteen years of his life he was Dean. He was the youngest son of Sir Francis Milman, physician to George III, and was educated at Greenwich, Eton and Oxford. Although as a scholarly poet he had a considerable reputation, his literary fame rests chiefly on his fine historical works, of which fifteen volumes appeared, including the History of the Jews, the History of Christianity to the Abolition of Paganism in the Roman Empire, and the History of Latin Christianity to the Pontificate of Nicholas V. The appearance of the History of the Jews in 1830 caused no small consternation among the orthodox, but among the Jews themselves it was exceptionally well received. Dean Milman wrote several hymns, including Ride on, ride on in majesty, When our heads are bowed in woe. Although this history carries the Jewish race down to modern times, it is included in the section of THE WORLDS GREATEST BOOKS treating of ancient history, as it is the history of an ancient race, not of a definite country.
