

Ivory Cradle: Poems

By Anne Marie Macari, Robert Creeley

American Poetry Review. Paperback / softback. Book Condition: new. BRAND NEW, Ivory Cradle: Poems, Anne Marie Macari, Robert Creeley, "Ivory Cradle" is the winner of the third annual "American Poetry Review" /Honickman First Book Prize, as chosen by poet Robert Creeley. In his introduction, Creeley writes, "now and again one comes upon a story so quietly and articulately told that it stays in mind long after, echoing, recasting the usual frames of reference and order, making whatever it is the world had been thought to be, quite changed and even, again, unknown." "Ivory Cradle" is such a story as it charts a personal journey through questions of faith and history, with its anger redeemed by passion and the transformative power of art. from "Morning in Florence" "I was out the door and halfway to the elevatorWhen he threatened to throw my clothes into the lobby. With the baby to think ofI had to know when to stay or go So I headed out alone into the consoling brown lightOff the river, feeling the childSwimming carefully inside me as I walked to seeFra Angelico's frescoes in cells Where monks once slept and knelt, contemplatedAnd vanished; where in rapture he worked fast...
