The leaves of plants and the petals of flowers under the microscope are found to be full of uncounted divisions that carry the juices to the pores. Have plants and flowers pores too, aunty? asked Rob. Certainly; and these divisions are made of woody and soft fibres curiously interwoven. The pores seem to be the vessels of the plants cut apart, and of these there are hundreds of thousands, and they are beautifully carved and figured, and every kind difi crently. Even the particles of sand on the seabeach and on the banks of rivers differ in the size and shape and color of their grains. Some are transparent and some opaque. What is opaque, Aunt Ownie? asked Caro. It is the opposite of transparent, dear. Some have rough and others have smooth surfaces. Some are round, some...
