Fritz that this boon comes to us. Fritz, dear unselfish Fritz, is the benefactor of the family after all. It must have been he who asked Dr. Martin Luther to speak for us. There, in his lonely cell at Erfurt, he thinks then of us! And he prays for us. He will never forget us. His new name will not alter his heart. And, perhaps one day, when the novitiate is over, we may see him again. But to see him as no more our Fritz, but Brother Sebastian!--his home, the Augustinian cloister!--his mother, the church!--his sisters, all holy women!--would it not be almost worse than not seeing him at all We are all to move to Wittenberg in a month, except Pollux, who is to remain with Cousin Conrad Cotta, to learn to be a merchant. Christopher begins to help about the printing. There was another thing also in my visit to the Wartburg, which gives me many a gleam of joy when I think of it. If the elector, whose presence I so trembled to enter, proved so much more condescending and accessible than his courtiers, --oh, if it could only be possible that we are making some mistake about God, and that He after all may be more gracious and ready to listen to us than His priests, or even than the saints who wait on Him in His palace in heaven! I SUPPOSE conflict of mind, working on a constitution...
